some thirty witnesses, the Court unani-mously decided that there was not a circum-stance proved pointing to the guilt of the prisoner, but that, on the contrary, the facts they therefore discharged bim.

they therefore discharged him.

The general course and conduct of the prisoner was subjected to critical examination, his whereabouts followed, and there was nothing proved in his action or manner that pointed him out as the guilty party.

The detectives (Wren and Fitch) were badly shown up during the trial. Neither of them were present at the time (though Wren was the party who swore out the warrant). It was testified in court that a man claiming to be Wren in disguise was claiming to be Wren in disguise was be Wren, was pursued by the sheriff, bont effect, and the matter is still doubt, though a man calling him-by that name entered the office of the county judge, and inquired as to the next grand jury term of his court. In the mean time a letter from Fitch was received from Richmond, addressed to young Peters, in which the address of his father was inquired after, the writer stating that something to his advantage might be gained by his promptness, &c.

In the notice of this murder in our last issue, hurriedly prepared, we find that great injustice was done to Peters, as many things noted then as facts turned out to be untrue, and we desire, as far as we can, to do away with the impressions made by the
